1. An internet domain name is a name used to access websites on the internet. People use easy to understand and remember names like youtube.com or google.com instead of having a long string of numbers aka IP addresses. This helps users find websites faster.
2. Domain names are important because they make websites easy to remember, helps users find websites faster, gives the website a professional look, and helps create businesses and solo individuals build online brands and websites. If domain names didn't exist, everyone would've needed to type long difficult numbers to access the websites.
3. Domain names should be unique to each website because if other websites had the same domain name, the internet will be confused and won't know which one to open. Each website has their own address. It makes websites their own so there isn't any confusion between yours and others websites. It allows the users to reach the correct website.
4. To register a domain name it means that you have to officially buy and claim the name so no one else can use it later on. You have to do this through a domain registrar company. When you are registered, you own the rights to use that domain for a specific amount of time which is usually more than a year.
5. If a domain is already taken, you can try different extensions for example: .net, .org instead of .com. Try adding extra words like, official, visit, shop. You can also try getting in touch with the domain holders if you can buy it from them or you can wait until their subscription expires.
